GREEK DEMONSTRATION. 24/8/54.

Huge crowds thronged the streets of Athens, protesting against the British Government's refusal to negotiate with the Greek Government on the question of the status of Cyprus. Shops had closed early to allow their staffs to join in the clamour --- and an address was read by the Primate of the Greek Church.

WOMEN'S ROWING.

Here's the start of one of the races in the first European rowing championship for women..... held in Amsterdam. Now the Russian crew are taking the lead. This was a sad day for Britain --- no victories, and in only one event was a British crew able to reach the final. This still further postpones the glorious day when British women will be able to walk about in Henley, wearing the lovely pink caps of Leander. All five events were won by ladies from Russia.

AERO EXPERIMENTS.

A wind-tunnel experiment representing 250 miles an hour, was shown as, for the first time, some of the secrets of the British Government Experimental Establishment are revealed by Universal IRISH News. Here's a demonstration of landing airborne troops in small spaces. And here's a test of the newest kind of rocket and cannon fire.

MOROCCO.

But here's a place where the war-engines are out in earnest..... armoured cars and tanks patrolling the village of Tiflet in Morocco. Despite precautions, a lot of trouble was caused by terrorists. The occasion was the anniversary of the day when their Sultan, Ben Youssef, was deposed.

Troops made an exhaustive search for concealed arms and ammunition --- and all suspicious characters were rounded up.
