DIAMONDS. 29/10/54.

This is one of the finest of the world's collections of diamonds --- in the office of Mr Harry Winston in New York. Now from the cutter's wheel, comes a super-diamond worth a half a million dollars. A nice present for any girl. But, looking facts in the face, very few girls will ever meet a man with a half a million dollars; you're lucky if you meet a half a million men with a dollar.

BIBLE EXHIBITION.

At the British Museum in London, an archaeological exhibition "[redacted]" was opened by Lord Samuel.

The treasures on show in this exhibition --- mostly from the Holy Land [redacted] --- have been recovered as the result of many years of patient excavation. They are objects which were in use in the times recorded in the Holy Bible. Some of them are several thousand years old. A bronze oil lamp from a town of the Old Testament, and a necklace that may have adorned the neck of a Princess of the Canaanites, are to be seen among the many priceless relics.

BOXERS TRAIN.

From the world of the big fights; training in London, is former middleweight-champion, Albert Finch. Now out of the ranks of the middleweights --- he is preparing to have a go at the title for light-heavies. The man to meet Albert, is title-holder Alex Buxton. He, too, is training in London --- in the Old Kent Road. As an essential part of working-up --- Alex is making life tough on a punch-bag.

FREEDOM BALLOONS.

At a secret location in Germany, near the borders of Czechoslovakia, workers of an organisation known as the Crusade for Freedom, send up messages into the sky carried by balloons of all shapes and sizes. The prevailing wind, carries them into the satellite countries behind the Iron Curtain. On the other side, the printed word is released --- designed to speed the freedom of Central and Eastern Europe.
