INTERVIEW MR. FOLEY.

SV. TALKS. Madrid may have its battlefields, but London has its battle roads. [in my opinion the most effective safeguard against this appalling slaughter is a speed-limit of 20 miles an hour in built-up areas, and the institution of a higher limit on the open road.]

CU. A car with good brakes travelling at 20 miles an hour can pull up almost within its own length. This will give elderly people and children, who are the chief victims, a better chance of escape.

INTERVIEW MR. HOLDSWORTH.

SV. Mr. Holdsworth. [Cyclists do not believe that cycle paths are the solution of the problem. In any case they are far too costly to become general] and what we want is safety on every road.

CU. Mr. Holdsworth. We must therefore see that all road users conduct themselves so as not to endanger others. We are opposed to the careless use of the roads, whether the offender be a pedestrian, a cyclist or a motorist.

CU. Cyclists do not believe that cycle paths are a solution to the problem. In any case these paths are too costly to become general, and what we want is safety on every road

INTERVIEW LT COL. MOORE-BRABAZON.

[CU talks. When we walk, cycle or motor, do we always remember to do the wise, safe and courteous thing?, Because if not then in a flash we may be the cause of turning some home into despair.]
