There was no silence this year, no ceremonial, nothing but memory in the people's hearts. The King's wreath stood by others, and the three services each sent a wreath.

Sir John Dill laid the army's tribute, in memory of old comrades long since dead, who fell to end what war can never end - itself.

-----> Then Sir Charles Portal laid the Air Force wreath.
The Premier sent the Cabinet's tribute.

Outside the Abbey in Remembrance Field, people laid crosses as in years past. Personal tributes these to personal memory. One cross stood there for Mr. Chamberlain. Once the last shot is fired, the best tribute of all would be resolve henceforth to tread the harder road of peace.
