A squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force is now on war-duty at a northern aerodrome. The pilots have all distinguished themselves against the Germans, and you can see they all come from the cities and wide open spaces of Canada. This airman's a visitor from a neighbouring Empire squadron.

All was quiet and it seemed like a blank day when the alarm sounded and the airmen rushed to take off.

A verey light signalled that all was clear for three more to get away. It's amazing that even the Germans don't realise that day raids on Britain spell Nazi suicide.

The leader of a South of England fighting base congratulated the two pilots who brought down the station's 600th Nazi - Pilot-Officer Stevens, D.F.C. and Bar, and Flt-Lt. Mungo-Park, D.F.C.
