Air raids in the other war - Japan against China, the conflict that still rages in the Far East. These almost terrifying pictures show the bombing of Chungking, China's new capital.

Too well the people knew what to expect; and they had practically no defence.

Over the city-centre the Japanese dropped stick after stick of heavy bombs. The Paramount cameraman on the fringe of the city secured astounding pictures, and the newsreel camera brings home to us the full horror of the wanton bombing of open towns.

1. JAPAN BOMBS ON!
2. First pictures of Japan's heaviest air blitzkrieg on Chungking, Chiang Kai Shek's capital. These films were smuggled out by an American cameraman after a trip of 19,000 miles.
5. Normally a city of 600,000, an additional half a million refugees are packed in the city. Now - amazing scenes!
17. Japan, angered by Chinese counter attacks on land, counts heavily now on air attacks. After nine years in China, Japan faces increasing American and British aid to China and embargoes against Tokyo's war machine! And smouldering Chungking takes hope - despite bombs.
