Here are the fighting planes given to Britain by the people of Burma. The pilots of the squadron shot down seven Italian bombers and two fighters in their ill-starred attack on the Thames Estuary.

Squadron Leader Tuck has brought down twenty-six planes. All his men have several Nazis to their credit. Like Britain Burma is proud of the men who fly this squadron - young in service, veterans in experience.

R.A.F. casualties faced the newsreel camera to give an interesting sidelight on the air war. The treatment is new and pleasant and gets the injured men fit again in the shortest possible time.

(SV) Some of the men have had had crashes. They like this treatment, but when they're convalescent things are better still - fun and games with the nurses.

What's shy in the wards comes out in the snow. Don't be jealous boys. There are still plenty of vacancies in the R.A.F. Come on, sister, you've got to take my temperature.
