A Northern naval base almost looked like the North Pole when Lord Halifax left for America. Lady Halifax was the first to board the drifter, which took the party out to the battleship King George V on which the new Ambassador made the journey. Mr. and Mrs. Churchill were there to see them off. Everybody ready to sail ? Right away, skipper.

(CU) Take Tobruk, and banish that sinking feeling. As a wartime precaution we held up these pictures until Lord Halifax had arrived in the States.

It's a departure from diplomatic practice for a statesman to resign the foreign secretaryship to become an ambassador. Lord Halifax does so at the Premier's request. Mr. Harry Hopkins, the United States Special Commissioner, was with the party.

(LV on deck) The nation wishes well to Lord Halifax. May he be a valuable link between the two great peoples ranged against the Dictators.
