With the cry, 'Any Old Iron,' the town of Seminole enlisted the younger generation of America for the Aid to Britain campaign. Five pounds of scrap iron bought a seat at a special children's movie matinee. An Englishman, Mr. Wolf, formally received two tons at the box office.

Scrap iron dealers, not to be outdone by the youngsters, sent enough to the railhead to fill ten trucks. It won't build a whole battleship, but it does show how public opinion stands over there - the wave of feeling that carried the Lease and Lend Bill on to the statute book.

Colonel Donovan, Mr. Roosevelt's special envoy to the war-zones, gave Paramount his impressions after a ten-week tour of Lybia and Greece.

(Donovan's Speech)

Skittles is quite knocking 'em over in feminine sporting circles. It's the start of the women's Bowling Championship. While the contest rages, mothers leave home, put family interests aside, and leave father holding the baby.

Fifteen hundred girl-teams from all over America are here to fight it out. Leading the favourites is pretty Gipsy Rose Lee. She believes that if you want to win you've got to pull your socks up; and who's going to argue? It's obvious Miss Lee can knock 'em down.

Now step up into the heavy-weight class.

If you want to see good bowling keep your eye on those pegs.
