Men in uniform were much in evidence at the League Cup Final. In the Arsenal dressing room several players peeled out of Air Force blue into the red shirts of Highbury. With genial George Allison, Eddie Maggood discussed the prospects of earning new honours for London. Preston had their own ideas about that, and so had their big battalions of supporters.

Admiralty First Lord A.V. Alexander greeted the players.

Roof-spotters were another war-sign as the second League Final began - one of the finest exhibitions of soccer Wembley has ever staged.

There was a sensational start. Kirchen's shot was punched out and in the goal-mouth scramble a Preston player handled. It was a penalty against the North End.

Leslie Compton took the kick, and hit the post !
(CROWD) Sportwriters nearly all said the goalie saved. Our repeat picture proves that he didn't touch it.

Preston got the first goal. Inside-right Maclaran putting the ball in the net.

Preston were playing football at its cleverest, but the Arsenal always looked dangerous.

Just before half-time Dennis Compton got the goal that put Arsenal level and won them the right to fight again for the League Cup.
