Reaching Hamilton, capital of Bermuda, King Carol put the Atlantic Ocean between himself and the Axis powers - the first real safety he has enjoyed since abdicating the throne of Rumania. These pictures of the ex-monarch's arrival have been rushed to England in six days, a record of wartime film transport. With a Cameron Highlanders officer who was appointed his A D C for the day Carol drove to his hotel.

But it was on Madame Lupescu, more than Carol, that curiosity centred. Rumour says that the King and this woman from whom he always refused to separate are now married. Since their flight from Central Europe these are the first pictures of the elusive Lupescu - quite a scoop under war difficulties too.
