Making their first appearance on the screen - the Havoc night-fighters. They're American-built planes with some very secret devices for putting paid to Nazi bombers. In May we brought down in Britain the record total of 143, of which night-fighters accounted for 98, in addition to destroying 8 in France. So here's to the Havoc and may it create more.

The Queen, in her capacity as a housewife, went to the Food Ministry, where Lord Woolton was staging a demonstration of how to make the most of the Sunday joint. Her Majesty said that one of the biggest problems in the royal household is spreading the ration over as many days as possible. Hot-pot, Woolton Pie and black pudding are among suggested ways of doing up the scraps. Inspired by the royal example we must shut our eyes, open our mouths and pretend we like what the Lord (Woolton) - sends us.

The Food Minister was also on hand when the first Lease-and-Lend food cargo arrived from America. 120-thousand pounds of cheese, 4 million eggs and 1000 tons of flour. It's good to know the States aren't forgetting John Bull's Inner Man.

Mid-West eggs have come along way, so Lord Woolton mustn't grumble if they make a song about it.

The cheese attracted most admirers. There was more than 50 tons, so those present felt justified in having a taste. It may have been its heavenly smell that made the Bismarck risk coming out of port Mr. Harriman, U.S. Defence Expediter, tried a sample. Then a 20-pounder was shared round. Who wouldn't be a docker !
