Issue No. 1074..16..6..1941.
Title: Generals Of Tomorrow.
Track: Open Road.
Lines: Stagg.
Voice: Mellor.

The British army is struggling up the slopes of hard experience towards the summit of victory. Tanks share with airplanes the first place amongst offensive weapons in 1941. Infantry co-operation types are here taking part in a firing demonstration. There are vacancies in the Tank Corps. It's one of the most attractive branches of the army, and it offers the chance to volunteer for the fight, without waiting to be called up.

Small scout-cars sometimes lead the advance of armoured divisions - fast, nippy little things, over any sort of ground.

Now cruiser tanks, designed and armed according to latest lessons of the war.

They fire smoke shells to screen the advance from the enemy.

(4th river shot. LV two tanks towards) Join the Tank Corps and you won't need to spend money on liver pills.

A town that's been blitzed now adds tank-insult to bomb injury. It's an A.I. testing ground and the performance fairly brings the house down.
