We are sure we speak for all, in saying with what pleasure we look on these pictures of Queen Mary. Her Majesty has lived almost in retirement in the West Country since the outbreak of war, but she made one of her now rare appearances while inspecting the ATS at a Southern Command Cadet Training Group.

There are so many girls in uniform nowadays, we almost forget we still have some men in the army. Her Majesty saw the future officers learning how war is waged in 1941.

May the day quickly return when Queen Mary will be a familiar figure in public life.
