The Army seems to be mechanising on the scale required by the present war. 100 Bren carriers at an Eastern Command manoeuvre demonstrated how quickly modern infantry units can be at the focal point of the fight.

(AFTER WHISTLE) They break off the action and remount to pursue the fleeing enemy. This war proves that a small attacking force, resolutely led, can scatter the biggest defences that try to hold fixed positions. Speed is all-important, and speed is what the Bren carriers give.

(LAST SCENE) If these pictures represent the real state of things in the army we can face invasion-prospects without fear.
