Back to the mother-ship after brushes with the enemy come Fulmar fighters, making perfect high-speed landings on the carrier deck.

(OFFICER) After the Fulmars come Albacores which carry bombs or torpedoes - dreaded by the Italian admirals who've never been to sea - at least not more than they could help

The Fleet Air Arm inherits the tradition of audacity and for the enemy it has lots more in store.

The Luftwaffe has descended on New York - but only by post.
The RAF sent over the remains of a Messerschmitt that was shot down and the Americans are putting it on exhibition. All the money raised will provide more bundles for Britain.

Five British victims were claimed by the Nazi pilot. A lot of hooey.

Here's the bullet-hole that eventually earned the plane its American tour.

Any time our friends in the United States want to see some more Jerry planes they've only to let us know. We've got a million of 'em !

Up in the Cascade Mountains near the Pacific Coast holiday-makers get summer sun and winter snows at the same time. It all looks topsy-turvy, but it's very pretty. Lucky pool.

The girls toiled up the slope to try out a new sport, tobogganing on ash-bin lids. It's probably not so easy as you might think, and the first thing is to get a good firm seat. When that's done they're all set to go.

It's a good sport, but to-morrow I'll bet they won't half have a headache.

30138.   Out where the snow defies summer's heat; out where King Winter swaps his muffler for a swim suit, we find a reflection of the sports calender in reverse. Snow sports, under a boiling sun! For our mountain cameramen, a real chance for lens portraits. The snow queens set off this vacation picture to a press-agent's fancy...The gals ride ashcan covers for a new snow thrill...The lid's off for back sliders!
