

LONDON WELCOMES SOVIET MISSION.

*****

Issue No. 1082..14..7..1941

Title: Man From Yesterday.

Track: Disputed Passage.

Lines: Stagg.

Vpice: Mellor.

On the platform to meet the Russian services mission were Ambassador Maisky and the deputy chiefs of staff of the three British fighting services, General Pownall, Admiral Philips, Air Vice-Marshal Bottomley. For those with eyes to see, this getting together of Britain and the Soviet is a great bound forward towards world sanity. The Prime Minister himself set the example of welcoming co-operation, Mr. Eden too has declared that the Red Bogey is laid. Party time-servers must wake up to the fact that Russia is with us in the fight - without any nonsense of national anthems, either.

The War Office was one of the first places the Russians visited and with the Hammer and Sickle Whitehall is now exchanging military views. Ambassador Maisky with General Golikov and his mission are co-operating with Britain to overthrow the enemy.

---