JAPS MUST LOSE CHANGTEH

Chinese troops recapture Changteh, heart of the rice bowl. A bloody forty day battle reaches it's climax as the last Japs are blasted from the City. The Japs sacrificed more than forty thousand men in their attempt to take and hold Changteh, but this captured equipment is vivid evidence of the success of the Chinese counter drive. China was fighting for one of her richest sources of food and her troops are happy in a job well done. Natives are quick to return to their homes behind the victorious army. There's work to do in this rice bowl of China. Hundreds of Jap prisoners were taken in this bitterest battle since the siege of Changhai in 1937. Conquer was their slogan -- but, what now Mister Tojo???
