

FLASHES.

Generalissimo and Madame Chiang Kai Shek inspected fighter squadrons newly arrived in China from the United States, where the Chinese airman have been trained. Throughout ~~the~~ seven years of War our Far Eastern Ally has been tragically short of aircraft. The new squadrons will adjust the balance and enable China to carry the air war into Japanese skies.

This ~~the~~ airplane of the future. Demonstrated in Washington, it's the model of a wingless jet-propelled plane. As shown by the smoke, Air ^{is} drawn ~~in~~ ^{through} the front to heating chambers, which expand it and eject it with rocket-force, to give the aircraft tremendous speed. After the war planes like this may be an every-day sight.

Following part of
~~After~~ the Marshall Islands, the Admiralties were stormed by U.S. forces in the Pacific. Gen. Macarthur directed operations in person. After a brisk, ~~but~~ heavy bombardment the landing barges went in, confined to a dangerously narrow, fifty-foot channel between coral reefs.

Veterans of many Pacific victories the Americans carried all before them. The occupation of Los Negros island was soon complete. Standing ~~on~~ ^{over} a dead, ^{Jap,} Macarthur said, This is the way I like to see them. An inspiration to each man, the General promises bigger victories to come.
