

Italians formerly prisoners of war are now in the U.S. Army. Under the flag of the Italian Service Engineers they've joined a specially formed pioneer brigade, in which they'll bulldoze, road-make and generally dig for victory. In that way they'll be a lot more useful than they were as prisoners.

 (Pole) Not so long ago ~~they were demonstrating that~~ ~~these breads soldiers~~ soldiers aren't a patch on the armies of the Free World. Now, in a non-fighting role, the Italians will release 50,000 Americans for front line war.

Governors of 38 American states were thinking mostly about the Presidential nominations when they attended their annual conference. Outstanding personality was Governor Dewey, Republican choice of candidate in the Presidential election.

1. TITLE: ITALIAN PRISONERS RAISE ARMY
2. Mussolini's battle-weary armies looked like this a year ago, when they surrendered in Africa, By the thousands, they were sent to prison camps here. Now, At Camp Sutton, N.C., they are no longer Prisoners of War for they've enlisted in a new Italian Army -- the Italian Service Unit Engineers. In regular G.I. uniforms, but wearing green armbands, they are still under Italian officers -- but will serve the U.S. Army as non-combatants. They're expected to release 50,000 Americans for combat duty. These Italians go to their new tasks with gusto. And as General Service Engineers, they'll build roads and bridges, handling cranes and bulldozers.
20. High voltage! Better watch those whiskers! Once soldiers of fascism, now they'll work with us to drive it forever from the earth!
