

FILM CHIEFS SEE BRITAIN.

The bomb damaged area round St. Pauls was on the ~~next~~ sight-seeing programme of the American film-magnates when they made their tour of southern England before leaving for the Continent. They talked to people bombed out by the blitz, fly-bombs and rockets. London policemen lived up to their reputation as friendly guides. Down the river at Rotherhythe the ~~visitors~~ visitors ~~tasted~~ tasted ~~a~~ a bit of London life and the beverage that goes with it.

Later they went to an airfield of Bomber Command, where they were welcomed by Air Commodore Lord Willoughby De Broke. They made special point of meeting all sorts and classes of people, one object of the visit being to get first hand knowledge of Britain after the war. At the Guards' Depot at Caterham, the ~~film~~ they ~~chiefs~~ attended a recruits' passing out parade.

(19 CU three) Soon afterwards our American guests left ~~see~~ for the Continent to ~~visit~~ post-war Europe, first hand investigation by the men who control the American end of the greatest entertainment industry in the world.
