ROYAL VISIT. TOUR PROGRAMME WEDNESDAY MORNING.

At Douglas War Memorial outside Villa Marina (10 a.m.) expected presentation to His Majesty of James McHarrie, 4 Mona Terrace, Douglas, who was in the same P.T. class at Cranwell as His Majesty in 1917, and came into daily contact with His Majesty for a period of some weeks. There were 13 altogether in the class. Mr. McHarrie went to Cranwell for training from 46 Squadron R.F.C. and after passing out as P.T.I., was posted to 120 Squadron R.A.F.

He was an instructor at the Gymnasium, Douglas, for the Manx Athletic Association before the last war, and was at one time Champion Wrestler and Weight Lifter of the Island. He is also keen on model yacht racing, and local wins include the Christian Cup in 1942, 1943 and 1945, the Pollard Trophy 1929, the Cowell Cup, and the Watterson Cup, Port St. Mary.

In 1924 he won the Open Baritone Solo Class at the Manx Music Festival, with 55 marks out of 60. There were 14 competitors.

He is now employed as a blacksmith at Gelling's Foundry, South Quay, Douglas.

He lost a son in the R.A.F. in this war on an operational flight to the Balkans.

He is a Manxman.

ROYAL VISIT. TOUR PROGRAMME WEDNESDAY MORNING.

At Onchan, outside cinema (10.20 a.m.) expected presentation to His Majesty of R.M.B.3042 Musician Pearson W.E., Royal School of Music, Douglas. Present address: 3 Clifton Terrace, Main Road, Onchan. Served in H.M.S. Collingwood continuously from 23rd May 1915 until 30th January 1919, except for a few weeks ashore in December 1915 and January 1916.

There were three Captains during Pearson's period of service in the Collingwood, viz., Wilmott Nicholson, C.C. Fowler and F.A. Powlett. Pearson was present at the Battle of Jutland in the same ship as H.M. the King who was, at the time of the action, Pearson thinks, a Midshipman.

Pearson has now been released from H.M. Forces and is at present on leave prior to returning to civil employment. He was recalled for service in January 1940, and was at H.M.S. "St. George" for 4 years and later at the School of Music at Howstrake. (In civil life he is employed by the Ministry of Pensions).

ILLUMINATED ADDRESS.

At a private reception at Government House, the Speaker of the House of Keys, Mr. J.D. Qualtrough, will present to the King an illuminated address from the members of the Manx Society, whose chief interest is the development of the Manx language.

Bearing the crest of the old House of Keys surmounted by the Crown the address reads:

To His Most Gracious Majesty George VI, King of Britain and the Kingdoms over the Seas.

It is the earnest desire of your loyal and humble subjects, the members of the Manx Society, to express their gratitude and delight on the reason of your visit to your Lordship of Man.

Above all it is a great pleasure to them to see you preside over the Annual Court of Tynwald and create a new record in their national story.

They assure you of their great love for you and for the Most Gracious Lady Her Majesty the Queen, and of their reverence for the Throne and the Empire.

Signed JOSEPH D. QUALTROUGH, (President)
FRANCES DAVIDSON, (Secretary).

ADMIRAL OF HERRING FLEET.

Under Governor Regus in the 13th century, fishing was introduced into the Island.

In 1610 a Commission was appointed and it introduced regulations for the control of the industry. Every farmer or tenant was ordered to provide eight fathoms of nets and ropes and buoys and they had to keep them always in good order.

A proclamation to this effect had to be made at Tynwald.

An Admiral of the Herring Fleet and a Vice-Admiral were appointed. Their ships carried special flags and their duties were if a shoal of fish was discovered to signal the news to the next boat. The signal was then sent from boat to boat throughout the fleet. The reason for this signalling was to ~~keep~~ ^{prevent} the news of the shoal within ~~their~~ narrow circles and thus stop intruders from interference with their catch of ~~relatives~~.

Though this old custom has ceased with the lapse of time, the Admiral and Vice-Admiral are still on the pay roll. The Admiral gets £5 a year and the Vice-Admiral £3.

It is hoped that opportunity will be given to interview the Admiral who is scheduled to be at Peel.

THE INVESTITURE.

The King will present 43 decorations on Tynwald Hill, among them being eight to Manxmen who have gained honours, and the parents of a Manxman who was killed in action in 1943 are to receive a Military Medal.

His Honour Deemster Cowley, the Second Deemster, heads the list. He will receive the insignia as C.B.E. This honour was conferred upon the Deemster as a reward for his services as Chairman of the War Committee of Tynwald. In that capacity he has been principal adviser to the Governor on administrative matters. Deemster Cowley is Grand Master of the Isle of Man Province of Freemasons.

Lieut. Col. J.D.Clague, Royal Artillery, of Onchan, will receive the O.B.E. conferred upon him, and also the Military Cross, which he won for distinguished service in the Far East.

Mr & Mrs Little, parents of C.S.M. Robert H. Little who live at Marown, awarded to their son for gallantry at Sidi Rezegh, in December 1941. He served in the Scots Guards and was killed in action in November 1943.

PROCEDURE ON TYNWALD HILL ON JULY 5th, 1945.

- (1) When Their Majesties are seated on the Hill and the various officials have taken up their places, the Guard of Honour will give the Royal Salute and the Marine band will play "The King" and the Manx National Anthem, everybody standing.
- (2) The King will resume his seat on the Hill and will say: "Learned Deemster, direct the Court to be fenced".
- (3) The First Deemster will then call upon the Coroner of Glenfaba Sheading to fence the Court.
- (4) The Coroner of Glenfaba will fence the Court.
- (5) The First Deemster will then say: "Outgoing coroners, surrender your staves of office to His Majesty the King".
- (6) When all the coroners have surrendered their staves, and have returned to their positions at the foot of the Hill, the First Deemster will say: "In-coming coroners, take the oath in ancient form to execute your office for the ensuing year, and receive your staves of office from the hands of His Majesty the King".
- (7) The First Deemster will then administer the oaths of office to the six coroners all together. The coroners will receive their respective staves of office from the King immediately after being sworn.
- (8) The King will then say: "Learned Deemster and reverend Lhathder, I exhort you to proclaim to the people, in ancient form, such laws as have been enacted during the past year, and which have received my assent".
- (9) After the laws have been read the Lieutenant Governor will say: "Will Your Majesty graciously ^{consent to} invest those gentlemen who have been awarded honours and decorations?"
- (10) His Majesty having signified his assent, the Lieutenant Governor will call out the names and awards one by one.
- (11) After the investiture, the Guard of Honour will remove headdresses. The First Deemster will then say: "Freemen of Mann, in your ancient Tynwald assembled, I call upon you, as an expression of your loyalty, to give three cheers for His Most Gracious Majesty the King".
- (12) The First Deemster will then say: "Has Your Majesty any further commands?"
- (13) The King, in the event of his having no further commands to give will say :

"The Tynwald will adjourn to the chapel and complete such business as remains to be transacted."
