BRUSSELS SALUTES BRITISH ARMY.

Three thousand men of the Guards Armoured Division marched into the great square outside the Palace of Justice in Brussels to be officially honoured by the Belgian capital. The Guards liberated Brussels in September, a feat of arms for which the city now rendered formal thanks.

On the dais stood the British Ambassador, Sir Hugh Knatchbull Hugheson. The Queen Mother, ~~Queen Elizabeth~~, was present, also her son Prince Charles, the Regent. ~~Belgium is still in a state of political turmoil over the question of whether King Leopold should abdicate.~~ The Burgomaster of Brussels, presented to an officer of each unit concerned a standard to commemorate the capture of the city from the Germans. The country But the ~~nation~~ is united in its ~~appreciation~~ gratitude for ~~of~~ the part played by the British Army in delivering ~~the country~~ it from the invaders. ~~The Queen Mother and those with her on the dais then witnessed~~ Then came the impressive spectacle of the march past of the most soldier-like troops in the world. The Guards were on parade.

BRUSSELS SALUTES BRITISH ARMY.

Three thousand men of the Guards Armoured Division marched into the great square outside the Palace of Justice in Brussels to be officially honoured by the Belgian capital.
The Guards liberated Brussels in September, a feat of arms for which the city now rendered formal thanks.

On the dais stood the British Ambassador, Sir Hugh Knatchbull Hugheson.   The Queen Mother, Queen Elizabeth, was present, also her son Prince Charles, the Regent.   Belgium is still in a state of political turmoil over the question of whether King Leopold should abdicate. The Burgomaster of Brussels, presented to an officer of each unit concerned a standard to commemorate the capture of the city from the Germans.   But the nation is united in its appreciation of the part played by the British Army in delivering the country from the invaders.   The Queen Mother and those with her on the dais then witnessed the impressive spectacle of the march past of the most soldier-like troops in the world.   The Guards were on parade.