

YANKS IN ENGLAND GO TO COLLEGE.

At Shrivenham, Berkshire, the American army has established a University for three thousand, six hundred men waiting to return to the States. In ^{the} two hundred and fifty courses students will be instructed by leading Professors.

7 is a course in journalism.
The war interrupted the education of millions of men, a mis-fortune which this University and others set up across the Atlantic seek to remedy. The most popular course teaches business administration. Nearly a thousand men have chosen it. Fewer students, but a good many never-the-less, are taking the Art courses.

Surveyors are promised an enormous field in post-war reconstruction and will be in big demand. As for agriculture a hungry world, more food conscious than ever before, indicates prosperity for farmers.

Now that the Axis is beaten the fighting men of yesterday are urgently needed to restore a war-weary world. Soldiers' Universities will help them on the way.
