

AEROPLANE GLASS DEMOBBERED.

Perspex, the transparent plastic used in gun turrets during the war is now available for ~~household uses~~ peace uses witness this new kind of ~~hassock~~. An exhibition boudoir in New York puts the accent on plexi-glass. The bedroom part of it, walled off with glass all round and air-conditioned, may not be the last word in privacy, but it's modern to the minute. The great advantage of perspex is that it moulds into any shape and can be cut with a saw. As it's well-nigh unbreakable, people who live in this kind of glass house can throw stones to their heart's content. When you really must be alone it pays to make quite sure you are.

~~Here~~ On the hat stand there's a selection of plastic hats. Here again the fact that perspex is easily moulded means that a ~~clever~~ handy woman can change the shape any time ~~she wants,~~ so This is a really worthwhile invention ~~vestment.~~
