RAIL SMASH KILLS TWO TEN INJURED

Three trains were involved in a freak collision twelve miles from London. The local train from Hatfield ran into the buffers at Potters Bar. Into its derailed coaches crashed the Express to Newcastle. The general chaos was made worse when an Express from Bradford, though slowed down by a warning, ran into it. Every coach of the local train was wrecked, but only two people were killed, ten injured. The rescue party and break-down gang, quickly summoned to the spot, were amazed that any passenger in the slow train should have escaped. It took eighteen hours hard work to clear the line.
