

MOSCOW WELCOMES BEVIN

The capital of the Soviet Union was the scene of hospitality on the far famed Russian scale, ~~and Moscow~~ on the far famed Russian scale. The ~~architectural~~ mixture of Western and Oriental architecture

The capital of the Soviet Union was the scene of ~~hospitality~~ hospitality on the far famed Russian scale. The mixture of Western and Oriental architecture seem to symbolize the different viewpoints which the two hemispheres must reconcile if we are to have lasting peace. The great telephone building has put its resources at the disposal of the army of Press correspondents cabling the progress of the Conference to all parts of the world.

To the Pilot House, wartime flyers' club, now scene of the Foreign Ministers' conference, came General Marshall, after him, M. Bidault, representing France.... Mr. Bevin ~~has~~ told reporters Moscow was warmer than London; otherwise the weather looked much the same. The Foreign Ministers having argued their way round the world ~~are~~ hammering out in Moscow the future of Germany. Progress towards solving the world's problem is bound to be slow, though in Russia, where Mr. Molotov can so easily communicate with Generalissimo Stalin, the pace may quicken. By unanimous vote the Russian Foreign Minister was elected chairman, and the conference began its arduous, difficult business. Upon the four powers world hopes-depend.