

HUGBY INTERNATIONAL, WEMBLEY

Eighty thousand people crowded Wembley for the Rugby League Cup Final, Leeds versus Bradford Northern.

Bradford wore striped jerseys. The Duke of Gloucester welcomed the teams and in brilliant weather Leeds kicked off. London got its annual glimpse of the Northern professional version of Rugby, played thirteen a side and differing in some of the rules from the game as played in the Rugby Union. Leeds won thru to the final without a point scored against them. They were not favourites and had the better of the first half.

Four hundred and fifty Yorkshire miners and their wives were guests of the National Coal Board. After twenty-five minutes a Bradford infringement earned a penalty for Leeds. Full-back H. E. Cook scored a goal and Leeds led two-none at the interval.

Bradford were a different side in the second half.

They completely subdued the Leeds forward line, and were soon dominating the play. After ten minutes a brilliant passing movement sent the ball to the left wing and Walters scored Bradford Northern's first try.

The kick failed. Now one point down Leeds counter-attacked and were awarded another penalty.

Again Cook put the ball between the posts and Leeds led four-three. ix

In the last minute Foster profited by a slip by the full-back and scored Bradford's second try.

So to the surprise of all the experts it was Ward who received the Cup from the Duke of Gloucester and took it home to Bradford.
