

SPOT NEWS FROM NEAR AND FAR

All the thrills of the County Fair are back again. The folks have seen ^{many} some of them so ^{often} many times they demanded something new, and in Atlanta they weren't disappointed.

Watch 7, J. reflect th
~~we~~ we have to pay five-hundred for a second-hand crook.

Now for the super-thrill of nineteen-forty-seven. Helen Howe, a Cherokee Indian, ^{trunk} gets into a wooden ~~trunk~~ with ^{six} sticks of dynamite and stays there while ^{it's} exploded. The wise guys say it's nothing really, because the trunk is so flimsy that the explosion just vanishes, so to speak, into thin air. That's as maybe, but they didn't volunteer to go inside, ~~with Helen~~.

The girl didn't get away Scot-free. She was dazed, and burned on hands and face. However, she said she'd be there for the next performance. Anybody care to try it with an atom bomb?

Steckman
Lotas
Non
#75

May 13, 1947

1. TITLE: DEATH DODGERS - WITH A NEW TWIST!
2. Atlanta gets a new thrill! No - not this one! This is routine County Fair stuff.
4. Well, this stunt's a little better - though somewhat rough on crosstown traffic!
6. But for the super-thrill of 1947 meet Helen Howe - full-blooded Cherokee Indian, ex-beauty parlor operator- and a handy gal with a handful of dynamite! Six sticks of it! The explosive is placed in this wooden coffin - then the dauntless Helen steps in! Yes, you've guessed it! The little gal is scheduled to "blow her top" - just to please jaded post-war appetites for thrills!
10. Lid down! Get away, bots - she's loaded!
11. Hey! Something's wrong! This time the trick didn't work right. The concussion was too great. Miss Howe is hurt - really hurt! Burned on the face and hands, the dazed Indian girl wonders what hit her! Later - after hospital treatment - Helen says she'll be back! The Show Must Go On!