

SPECTACLE IN BERLIN

At the Olympic Stadium, Berlin, the Army of the Rhine stages a full-scale tattoo.

Before Sir Sholto Douglas, Military Governor of the British Zone, and stands crowded with Allied and ex-enemy spectators, is presented a military "show", rather than a show of military might.

Whatever the feelings aroused in German hearts by the skirl of the pipes, we recall the days when searchlights played on British skies, and scenes like this were pipedreams of a doubtful future.