COMPLETE DESCRIPTION OF SCENES.

This is the harvest of the tobacco plant story, started some months ago by J Gemmell. Practilly nothing can be shewn of the manufacture, as the leaves are not yet cured or dried enough. After picking, the leaves are dried in sheds, then striped of the veins, then rolled together and placed in barrels to mature, the better the brand of tobacco, the longer it takes in the maturing process. In the best qualities it can take three years, and often in old brandy casks. Female in picture is the wife of Mr Ron DUNCAN a close up of whom is shewn smoking some of his own tobacco.

At the present stage it is still experimental, but he his now satisfied that he can grow it successfully. The harvest shots I shot are perhaps the first in the history of this country.

Apparently Mr Duncan is a well known writer of plays and has three running at the present time in the west end.

Other dope attached.
