

SARDINE CATCH HITS PISCATORIAL JACKPOT

Out from Black Harbour, New Brunswick, the Canadian sardine fleet sailed on the springtide to meet the annual sardine migration already reported off the coast by radar and depth-sounding devices. ~~Net~~ traps are formed when the shoals are encountered, ~~when~~ ^{and} the only difficulty is getting the enormous catch into the boats. All records have been broken this year, with an average haul of a million sardines per day. That represents a year's supply of Points for about three hundred people, if they didn't want any tinned milk. [Back at the canning factory the sea harvest is handled with a speed that keeps pace with the world's hunger. Nothing is wasted. Even the scales are used by artificial jewellery manufacturers. Much of the output will come to Europe, very welcome in times of fat-shortage, — Thanks to Canada, and ²/₁ the sardines, for happening to pass that way.

Experts believe to fish migrate along yr of off Norway. My ~~a caught~~ a fisher in one of
it will ~~have~~ ^{be} quite a swim.