RUGGER INTER: ENGLAND BEAT WALES

When Wales kicked off against England at Cardiff Arms Park their 15 included 6 new internationals, a much changed side from last season's brilliant winners of the Triple Crown. Many experts outside the Principlaity said England looked good enough, on paper, to rise above the hoodoo of repeated Cardiff defeats. They were badly shaken after only 14-minutes play when the referee gave a penalty against England. Rhephandhamathanathanath 19-year-eld Terry Davies just got the ball between the posts, to put Wales 3 points up.

(aft crowd) Two minutes after the penalty England hit back. Outside-half Regan passed to left-wing three-quarter Bazley. He passed to his centre Cannell and the St. Mary's Hospital man touched down for a try.... Nim Hall added the goal points with a wonderful kick.

By 5-3 England led at half time. The answer to the question, who'll win, was no lemon and Wales began the second half confident of turning the tide. England began as though determined to make sure of their first victory at Cardiff for five years. Another penalty was awarded to England. Hall entrusted the kick to J. E. Woodward, 7 The right-wing three-quarter earned another three points.

(aft. crowd) Near the close Wales might have drawn level. Bleddyn Williams sent M.C. Thomas away; he passed, only for Ken Jones, of all people, to knock on. So England won, 8-3, after their best showing at Cardiff for a long time.
