Guildford, Surrey, cast its official mind back nearly 300 years, when citizen John How, and another, John Parson, left money for an annual charity bequest. Two servant-maids benefit by it each year. Elizabeth Dobson threw dice, as the charity ordains. Her opponent was Miss Emily Bayston. She lost, but became winner of the John Parson chairty, now the richer of the two. So the winner lost and the loser won. The Mayor presented Miss Dobson with 12-pounds-nineteen and when she had signed for it His Worship presented 13-pounds-six to Miss Bayston, and everybody was happy.

Two lucky girls and just time to pick up something at the sales.
