

MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY RAG

Shrovetide brings out a lot more than pancakes. Manchester Students gave the Chancellor of the Exchequer a lesson he's bound to ignore, how to make people shell out and look pleasant. A Morris Minor was raffled for a shilling, but most of the money spectators parted with was gone for good. There<sup>are</sup>/at least as many shrewd people in this great City as anywhere else, but not even Manchester folk can resist the students at the Shrovetide Rag. For their part the undergrads gave good value for money with an entertaining procession. Prominent in the cavalcade were the Queen of the Rag herself and a lot of attendants, male and female. The fun was as broad as it was long.

115
The Rag shook Manchester out of its business routine for an hour or two, but if it raised 10,000 pounds for local charities who'll complain.

161.