

PRESIDENT SEES LINCOLN DOCUMENT UNVEILED

A Washington Presbyterian church will preserve for posterity an historic document of Abraham Lincoln's, in his handwriting. It was accepted by the church pastor.

Paramount President Barney Balaban was the donor.

The document sets out Lincoln's first proposals for ending slavery in the United States. To America it is a charter of freedom. Truly fitting was the presence of President Eisenhower, a Republican, in this church at which worshipped the greatest of them all, Abraham Lincoln, who valiantly fought, that freedom might not perish from the earth.

FLASHES!

The Washington Presbyterian Church at which Abraham Lincoln worshiped was visited by President Eisenhower and Paramount Films' President Barney Balaban, who ~~unanimously~~ presented the ^{historic} ~~primary~~ document in which Lincoln set out his first proposals for abolishing slavery ~~in the United States~~. A much appreciated gift.

Wilton Parish Church, Wiltshire, had royal ~~worshippers~~ at the morning service. Week-ending at Wilton House with the Earl of Pembroke, Her Majesty and the Duke of Edinburgh came to the picturesque ^{Church}, much to the delight of the country people.

Entertained at Soestdijk Palace, country home of Queen Juliana, were 50 flood-refugee children between the ages of five and seven. In the party ~~atmosphere~~ atmosphere, with the Queen and her daughters making their little visitors feel at home, their recent experiences in the floods were forgotten for an hour or so.

A good time was had by - nearly - all.
