FAREWELL TO MARSHAL TITO

The now familiar Tito cavalcade went to Hampton Court. 20-minutes later they drove to Windsor. Minutes were precious. American tourists ~~had~~ <sup>have</sup> nothing <sup>on</sup> the Marshal, when it comes to sight-seeing in a hurry. There was just time to see the State Rooms of the castle, look pleasant for the photographers and go on to the next engagement. Next day the Yugoslavian President was back at Westminster Pier and the historic 5-day visit was over. Mr. Eden and Admiral McGriggor bade him goodbye. By this time the majority of people regarded Tito as a friend. We do not value our friends for what we get out of them, but history may well say that the association of our two countries, begun in ~~war~~ <sup>war</sup> and stimulated by this visit, was a dominating influence of the 20th century.
