

FLASHES!

The Atlantic Blue Riband Liner United States brought to New York Dr. Adenauer, Chancellor of Western Germany. He was accompanied by his pretty daughter Dr. Lottie Adenauer. Object of the visit was to appeal to President Eisenhower to help in the rearming of German military units for the proposed European army of 12 divisions.

Round Nairobi police and home guards kept watch 24-hours a day and put up barbed wire defences, expecting the Mau Mau to attack the suburbs while the men were away at work. During the trial of Jomo Kenyatta it was thought the terrorists would strike at every unguarded place. Kenyatta has ^{since} ~~since~~ been sentenced to seven years hard labour for leading the Mau Mau. The security patrols examined every possible hideout. By now the bandits' method of lightning attack and getaway is only too well known. The danger is as great by day as in darkness.

When news of Kenyatta's conviction spread, Kenya spent its most anxious night since the terror began.

The White House was invaded. For the first time since the Easter Egg roll was given up during the war it was held again. The President and Family were at home to as many thousand Americans as cared to invite themselves - apparently half the population of Washington. Unconcerned by the crush were young Dwight and Barbara, the President's grandchildren. They decided to be ^{good democrats} ~~democrats~~ and join the egg roll like good Republicans. Then that Prince of good mixers the President himself joined in the fun.

The gardeners hope to get the lawns in good shape again, ready for next Easter.

As witness the next day at the White House — where the Easte Egg Roll is being revived for the first time since 1941. The crowd that pours onto the south lawn is something to behold! The two eldest Eisenhower grandchildren, Dwight David Second, and Barbara, get into the spirit of the affair — with the army of youngsters who enter the grounds hour after hour....

And look what happens when the President decides to come down and join the crowds!
A mob scene! ! Chief Executive and grandchildren enveloped! But the enthusiasm and good spirit survive the crush, for another memorable holiday at the White House.
