20

Crossing the Firth of Clyde to Land at Dunoon, whose piper greeted them, came the Argyll & Sutherland Highlanders. Dunoon, which has long been the headquarters of the Eighth Battalion, was conferring upon the Regiment the Freedom of the Burgh. Among spectators were the youthful Duke and Duchess of Argyll. On the saluting base stood Provost Wyatt.

(colours) On Parade were some men of the First Battalion who served nearly have ~~fought~~ in Korea. For/200 years, since the Regiment was formed/it has shed Highland blood on every battlefield where Britain fought. The Provost said Dunoon was proud to confer the highest honour it could.
