

ROYAL MARINES TROOP OWN COLOUR

It was the day of St. George and merry England. ~~and~~

✓ the Honorary Colonel Commandant, (General Wildman-Lushington,
took the salute as the Royal Marines' Regimental Colour was trooped for the first time since 1932. In the 21 subsequent years the ^{Royal} Marines have added to their record of glory in many theatres of war.

(117) Some American Marines, sprinkled among onlookers,
saw with friendly rivalry a perfectly performed ceremony.
The colour having been trooped the whole regiment now marched past.
