

The depot at Kew Green was one of several the Duchess of Kent visited on Alexandra Rose Day. Boys of Kew School were perfect gentlemen, and the vicar ~~assured~~^{assured} the Duchess that the annual collection was going very well. H.R.H. also went to Morden Hall, received there by the Chairman of the Urban District Council. The day was instituted in 1912 by Queen Alexandra. The Duchess is now its 30

President. Funds raised benefit a number of charities, many of which receive no state aid.