

FRENCH AIR DISPLAY

7

The new French fighter, the Mystere, piloted by Colonel Rozanoff and watched by General Gruenther, Commander of NATO, twice broke the sound barrier during the 20th International Air Display at Le Bourget near Paris. It also broke windows in the Champs Elysees and gave President Auriol something to be proud of.

Among the new types on show were the Hurel, with the knife blade wing, and a fearsome jet job breathing fire and thunder.

Apart from the inevitable "oozlem" bird, flying in ever decreasing circles, the highlight of the show was the Supermarine Swift, which flew from London to Paris in nineteen-minutes eighteen-seconds - ~~six hundred and seventy miles an hour.~~
