

DUCAL TEST BENEFITS PLAYING FIELDS

The Dukes of Norfolk and Edinburgh captained opposing sides at Arundel Castle, both with enough England players to make Australia tremble. Bill Edrich and John Langridge opened for the Duke of Norfolk's eleven, and 30,000 admission-free spectators eventually saw the Earl Marshal go out to bat on his own private ground. The Duke of Ed'bro, whose off-spinners were once praised by Bradman, was attacking the other end.

Then came the duel of the Dukes, the batsman showing a useful defence until the royal bowler sent up an extra tricky one and hit the stumps. That must have come in a bit. What do you think, Swim Jonton? Undoubtedly. Very promising bowler. Don't think I've seen him before. What's his name?... Well, fancy not knowing that! Over 2,300 was raised for the playing fields. The Duke of Edinburgh's team were left to get 205./ Of those the skipper himself hit 18 in 12 minutes.... (KRAUD) The Duke of Norfolk bowled to an off side field; so far off they should have been in the next field..../ The Norfolk team won by 8 runs, and the Duke of Edinburgh's wicket was taken by George Cox.
