

WHOSE ZOO? ANIMALS ENTERTAIN KIDDIES

In the last week of the holidays the zoo at Stanley Park, Vancouver, stages a get-together for the young in years, on two feet and four. Lunch time's the high spot of the day. The animals believe there's more joy in receiving than giving.

Little porkers aren't interested in bottles; they want a trough-full - greedy pigs.

A goat'll eat anything, but it prefers real food.

Neddy wasn't too keen on morning showing his faces in the lunvh interval, Still, these little human beings just won't take a hint.

Apart from those pigs the bottle was in demand all round.

While the donkey received attention a young goat fancied a ~~little~~ little ~~skint~~ skint
