

SOLDIERS' FAMILIES LEAVE TRIESTE

It was farewell to Trieste for more than 200 British women and little children. They were on the way home. As Zone A of the much disputed territory is being handed over to Italy the soldiers' families were leaving - pleased with mixed feeling - ~~happy~~ to be going home but a little sad to be bidding farewell to the country where they've spent a very happy time. Also it meant a temporary separation from husbands and fathers. ~~The~~ ^{all} military ~~commander~~ ^{Commander} ~~Governor~~, General Winterton, ~~saw them off~~. Another 60 families, of men of the Suffolk Regiment, are transferring to Germany. This was the end of another ~~main~~ chapter in troubled Trieste.
