

SCOTLAND AND WALES SHARE SIX GOALS%

Big George Young and Wally Barnes led Scotland and Wales on to the most famous arena in the game, Hampden Park.

Wlaes were full of confidence but everybody North of the border thought Scotland's great defence would be too ~~much~~ ^{strong} for the Welsh forwards. Hampden Park can hold 120 thousand, this afternoon a mere 71 thousand saw the game, too many grandmothers having decided to stay alive. Welsh outside right Foulkes was prominent in the early stages, but before long the pressure was put on by Scotland, Mackenzie of Partick giving Reilly his first chance to show he was in good form.

Though Scotland were the better team, inspired by their early goal, they scored no more till very nearly half time, The Young ~~put~~ put Johnstone in possession. The inside-right made no mistake.

Half-time, Scotland leading two-nil.

Foulkes ^{put the ball across} ~~placed a corner beautifully~~ and that great centre-forward Charles scored for Wales.

161

But 9-minutes later ~~the~~ ^{Daniels} Scots dashed Welsh hope of an equaliser. Daniels slipped and Reilly ~~scored~~ ^{got} Scotland's third goal.

It seemed that Wales hadn't a hope in the world. And then Allchurch got the best goal of the match. He beat two men and fired in an unstoppable shot from the penalty line.

Only two-minutes to go. The ball found John Charles again. Farm ran out but Charles made sure of it. Wales miraculously earned a draw, 3-3.
