

FIRST PICTURES PRIME MINISTER IN BERMUDA

Canopus touched down on the tail-end of a storm and a blustering wind still swept Bermuda as the Prime Minister and Mr. Eden emerged from the aircraft. Waiting to greet them was the Governor, Sir Alexander Hood, a handsome figure in his white uniform and plumed hat. He congratulated Sir Winston on his 79th birthday.

The Prime Minister appeared well rested after the long flight and gladly accepted the Governor's invitation to meet Bermudian leaders and their wives, who only a few days ago had been presented to the Queen. In the Mid-Ocean Club had been prepared the conference room, with its round table and nine chairs, where Sir Winston will meet President Eisenhower and the French Prime Minister Laniel M. ~~Exxiei~~. The Foreign Secretaries of the three powers will support their leaders at the meeting. Sir Winston inspected the guard of honour mounted by the Royal Welch Fusiliers. The Governor assured the Prime Minister that this <sup>is</sup> ~~wiki~~ not usual weather for Bermuda and that he might expect something calmer before many hours had passed. The eyes of the whole world are on Bermuda. From the conference much good is confidently expected.
