

PAINTING WITH TOES

4

Fame of an original kind turns it light on Celia White, of Southfields, London, one of those rare people who can do two difficult things at once. Of course lots of girls can play the piano, but with Celia that's only half of it. Her hands fully occupied, what are her feet up to? Well, while she soft pedals the left one, she's taught her right foot to draw, and has ~~the only~~ toes in Britain with an artistic bent.

67

She toes the line and it's a picture to watch. If the results were on the Picasso side it would be excusable, but not a bit; the drawings are a lot better than most people can do with their hands. Exercising to cure flat feet she found she had talented toes. Wonder if they'd be any good at the pianofecty.

1691