

ENGLAND BEAT IRELAND%

What a tearing start England made against Ireland! Harlequins left-wing, Davies, looked to be blocked by the defence but he passed to Martin Regan, and the Liverpool stand-off half was across the line. ~~The try was not converted.~~

(31) [15 minutes later Woodward was bursting his way through, and when not even he could storm the defence he passed to his centre, Butterfield got England's second try.

7/10 Near half-time Murphy-O'Connor scored a penalty-goal for Ireland; a wonderful kick. So England led, 6-3, at the interval.

No lack of vigour in the second-half, either.

125 England went further ahead with an easy penalty-goal, kicked by Ian King.

(140) Near the end, ~~with Ireland the~~, England got a goal. Butterfield put the South African-born <sup>London</sup> Metropolitan policeman away - Tug Wilson - and he put it down where he liked. King easily converted.
