

QUEEN SEES N.S.W. AT WORK AND PLAY

It was like Ascot on the Randwick Race course at Sydney. Big ~~race~~^{event} of the day was appropriately the Queen Elizabeth Stakes. From the mechanical gate a perfect start was assured even for this big field.

In the lead from the start was the 33-1 outsider Blue Ocean.

The Jockey was congratulated by the Queen and silently thanked by the bookies.

A hundred miles north of Sydney Her Majesty and the Duke were welcomed at Newcastle by the Mayor and Mayoress.

Though there's no hint of the Tyneside about this coastal town it's none the less the centre of Australia's biggest coal mining area. On her brief visit/~~the~~ Queen went to the Broken Hill Iron and Steel Works, one of the largest in the British Commonwealth, outside the Mother country.

Her Majesty met some of the 8,000 employed there.

~~Nearly the whole Newcastle population lined the sunny streets to wave the Queen goodbye.~~

108 Wollongong, a town with a delightfully Australian-sounding name, is 50-miles south of Sydney, and a smaller place altogether than Newcastle, but there was just the same ^{the} fervent welcome, especially from ~~many~~ children.
